Background

The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) Regional Offices on Women's Health has contracted with John Snow Incorporated (JSI) to administer this RFA. The mission of the Department of Health and Human Services Office on Women's Health (HHS OWH) is to improve the health of women across the life-span by advancing women's health research, health care services, public and health professional education and training through activities with the HHS Office of Public Health and Science, other governmental agencies, public and private organizations, and consumer and health care professional groups.

The program objectives of the HHS Regional Offices on Women's Health are to:

- Advance superior health practices for women by identifying and replicating successful HHS women's health programs in communities across the U.S. states and territories
- Promote public education by increasing the participation of women and girls in health education programs and increasing the number of information sessions to the public
- Collaborate with partners on women's health issues to increase access to health and human services
- Foster the availability and use of health information by increasing the number of users to Quick Health Data Online
- Promote and provide professional education on women's health issues supporting the shift from reaction to prevention in health care

Ten Regional Women's Health Coordinators (RWHCs) in the United States coordinate and implement national public health initiatives to promote a greater focus on women's health issues at the regional, state and local levels. They advance the mission of the Office on Women's Health in the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and represent the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Health (Women's Health) by administering programs that improve the health of women in communities across the country, and by coordinating activities and programs in health care service delivery, research, and public and health professional education. Sensitivity to local, state, and regional needs in women's health is reflected in their work to identify priority health areas, to establish networking relationships, and to implement initiatives addressing regional women's health concerns. For additional information about the Office on Women's Health or activities in your area, please contact your Regional Women's Health Coordinator by visiting <http://www.womenshealth.gov/owh/>.

Project Area To Be Funded

Violence against women and girls is perpetrated in all types of personal and family relationships and crosses economic, educational, cultural, racial, age, and religious lines. The United States Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) estimated that nearly one-third of women murdered each year in the United States are killed by their current or former intimate partners.¹ BJS also reported that approximately one million women are stalked each year², and three percent of college women are victims of an attempted or completed rape in each academic year.³

Funding is available for specific events or activities intended to prevent, raise awareness of, or respond to the epidemic of violence against women and girls in the United States. Violence against women and girls encompasses intimate partner violence, domestic violence, sexual assault, sexual abuse, stalking, emotional and verbal abuse; as well as bullying, human-trafficking, and other forms of trauma or abuse.

This funding opportunity addresses the physical, mental, and emotional impact of violence against women across the life cycle (e.g. girls, adolescent girls, women of reproductive age, pregnant women, mature women, and older women.) Applications for the Prevention of Violence Against Women and Girls project may include education and prevention activities such as: VAW awareness walks, VAW specific health fairs, VAW prevention workshops for women and girls, VAW training sessions for community providers, and local public health awareness projects on VAW.

Multiple federal websites are available that provide information, fact sheets, materials, templates and programming ideas as well as links to policies and legislation. You can access these many websites by visiting <http://www.womenshealth.gov/violence/>

Examples of activities that will not be funded include: research, direct clinical services, screening services and testing kits.
